Shri M.C. GUPTA

FROM THE DIRECTOR

We stand on the threshold of the new millennium and it is time to ponder over IIPA's role to meet the challenges of the next century. Our main strengths are:

- our experience built over the last 45 years in various facets of public administration
- our focus on changing role of civil servants and their capacity building
- our orientation on excellence, relevance and application
- our capability to move with the time and to innovate
- Networking with national and international institutes
- our facilities and resources

These characteristics make IIPA uniquely equipped to promote a critical understanding of the dynamics of public administration, the social, political and economic environment within which it functions, and in promoting administrative excellence.

Establishment of IIPA with liberal support extended by the Government is reflection of the importance attached to the problems of governance in the country. The establishment of a Regional Branch in almost every state and Local Branches at district level has further helped to spread this awareness. The Institute's Journal—Indian Journal of Public Administration—published over the years, has all along maintained a high standard and has now come to acquire a status of repute in the professional literature on the subject. Similarly, Nagarlok, the quarterly journal on urban administration has also acquired a certain stature in Public Administration. The Institute can take legitimate pride in its library with upto date collection of books and periodicals. Over the years the Institute has acted as a national forum for serious exchange of ideas on critical themes through conferences, seminars, workshops, etc., for practicing administrators, academicians and others engaged in study and research of public administration. To enhance capacity of practicing administrators, academic-cum-professional training courses are organised on regular basis, supported by continuous research, consultancy and case studies. The growing interest in Institute's activities is evident from its membership which has increased from 500 at its inception to over 10,000 now.

A mention was made in the last year's report about a major study undertaken by the Institute on "Twelfth Lok Sabha Elections: Policy, Process and Post-Script". This study has since been completed and a validation seminar on its findings was held at the Institute in June 1999. The study covers comprehensively the various dimensions of managing elections in world's largest democracy.

Education and Training continue to be our priority. In August 1998, a new part-time post-graduate Diploma Course on Information Technology and Management was launched, for civil servants, executives in public sector undertakings and others. The course imparts practical skills in use of computers and related technologies and its application to management of public services.

Another prestigious venture of the Institute was the partnership with the University of Birmingham and Civil Service College, U.K. for their one year Public Service M.B.A. Programme designed for middle management officers. IIPA's role was to handle the one-week Pre-UK and two-week Post-UK training modules. The programme also provided opportunity to three faculty members including the Director to visit UK for interaction with the faculty of the Birmingham University and the course participants. For the year 1999-2000, IIPA has again been selected as the Partner Institute in India with a much broader role to play.

The participants of the 24th Advanced Professional Programme in Public Administration (APPPA) were attached to the world renowned French Institute, namely, ECOLE Nationale d'Administration (ENA) during November, 1998 for having an overview of the French system of administration and the functioning of the European Union. This could be made possible due to close contacts developed by the two Institutes.

Apart from ENA, IIPA has forged international linkages with (a) Mauritius Institute of Public Administration and Management (MIPAM) for conducting courses/workshops for their civil servants, executives and the faculty, collaborative research, information sharing etc., and (b) University of Namibia, 'Centre for Public Service Training' for training Namibian Civil Servants, carrying out joint research projects, exchange of faculty and sharing of information, etc. I had the good fortune of an exciting and inspiring audience with His Holiness the Dalai Lama at Dharamshala in July, 1998. His Holiness appreciated the support provided by the Government of India and the people of India to the people of Tibet and the contribution made by the IIPA in training civil servants of the Central Tibetan Administration. We do hope to receive him at the IIPA in the near future.

The most noteworthy event of the year was the visit of the Prime Minister of India Shri Atal Bihari Vajpayee to deliver the Founders' Day Endowment Lecture and the Convocation Address to the participants of 24th APPPA, on 29th March, 1999. The historic visit of Prime Minister was memorable in many ways. It was after long years that India's Prime Minister visited the Institute. His address was most thought provoking wherein he exhorted IIPA to benchmark itself against other institutes and observed that IIPA could help in carrying out administrative and legal reforms.

Hon'ble President of India Dr. K.R. Narayanan, our Patron and Hon'ble Vice-President of India Shri Krishan Kant, our President, have been very kind and generous to us and we are indeed grateful to them.

I place on record my deep sense of gratitude to the Hon'ble Chairman and Members of the Executive Council and the Chairman, Standing Committee as well as members of other Committees for their continued guidance and advice for management and development of the Institute. The unstinted and positive support of the faculty and the excellent work put in by the Administrative Staff saw all round improvement in our academic endeavours and the much needed development of Institute's infrastructure. I am also thankful to the guest faculty who lent support to us and enabled us to sustain our training programmes and other activities. We have received excellent support from the Department of Personnel and Training, Ministry of Finance, Ministry of Urban Development, Ministry of Agriculture and the Planning Commission. I look forward to closer and more purposeful relationship not only with the Union Government but also the State Governments, our Regional and Local branches, State Institutes of Administration and the national level apex institutions. And, finally I would like to place on record my immense gratitude to all members of IIPA for their enthusiastic and positive support to our activities.

(M.C. GUPTA)

Prime Minister's Visit to IIPA

A significant event in the life of Institute was the visit of Shri Atal Bihari Vajpayee, Prime Minister of India on March 29, 1999 to deliver the Founders' Day Lecture and Convocation address of its prestigious Advanced Professional Programme in Public Administration (APPPA). In his address, Shri Vajpayee observed that after completing 45 years of its existence, IIPA should benchmark itself against world's pre-eminent centres in public administration. He mentioned that for good governance, we need an administrative system which instead of lording over citizens, is responsive, transparent, efficient and caring; responds to their concerns and complaints with dispatch and dedication; is open, honest and accountable with professional competence to decide between right and wrong; demonstrates efficiency through results, especially with regard to delivery of services with minimum cost and is compassionate. It must have a heart that feels for the poor and a mind that cares for their needs. Highlighting the role of the administrator, the Prime Minister said that he wants to see the entire administrative machinery, from top to bottom, work with a sense of mission and a result oriented approach, without any fear or favour. The fulfilment of people's expectations depend largely on how well and how fast the policies and programmes of the government are implemented by the bureaucracy. His Government's priorities, he said, would be to bring about administrative reforms and supportive legal reforms and in this endeavour he sought the assistance of the Institute. The Institute should also do serious introspection on how far it has succeeded in its mission to actively participate in the training and re-training of civil servants in the art and science of public administration. A complete text of Prime Minister's address is reproduced in the Report. (Annexure I)

Shri S.B. Chavan, M.P. and Chairman of the Institute, in his presidential address observed that a major task before the society and the government is to manage the internal dynamics while integrating with the global society. He observed that while strengthening the concept of a civil society as our goal within the country, our relations with the outside world would continue to impact our priorities and perceptions. He congratulated the Prime Minister for having taken the bold initiative to visit Pakistan generating hope of peace and friendship with our neighbours.

Shri Chavan appreciated IIPA's endeavour to set up SAARC Centre for Public Administration and a Centre for Ethics in Government and Public Life and observed that good governance is the need of the hour and one can not conceive of good governance without imbibing the tenets of an ethical code in government and public life.

Shri M.K.R. Janarthanan, the Minister of State for Personnel, Public Grievances and Pensions, also addressed the gathering. He emphasised the need to have a competent and forward looking civil service, capable of analysing the emerging challenges in this competitive interdependent world. He appreciated the role of IIPA in imparting training to a very large number of civil servants and working out international collaborations in the field of training.

Shri T.N. Chaturvedi, M.P. and Chairman, Standing Committee in his vote of thanks remarked that bureaucracy is undergoing a crisis of confidence and that there is a need to redefine its role.

Earlier welcoming the guests, Shri M.C. Gupta, Director, IIPA, pointed out that while policy packages have been evolved on family planning and family welfare, a concerted effort is needed to combat illiteracy, poverty and unemployment which continue to be the three major challenges before our society. He also mentioned about Institute's plans to start courses for government officers, NGOs and others for sensitisation in these important areas.

Initiative for Establishment of SAARC Centre for Public Administration and the Centre for Ethics in Government and Public Life

SAARC has come to be recognised as an active and significant ameliorative factor in the social, political, cultural and economic life of the region. In order to make its presence felt in more powerful and concrete ways, the Institute has submitted a proposal to the Government of India for establishing the SAARC Centre at the Institute and offered its services to act as the nodal agency for SAARC countries for initiating, sponsoring, organising and coordinating a variety of cooperative efforts in the field of public administration.

The Institute also initiated another proposal for the establishment of a Centre for Ethics in Government and Public Life with the objective of:

- conducting research in issues related to ethics and government
- organising workshops and seminars to discuss various ethical issues
- preparing/publishing case studies, working papers, articles and books and developing a data bank of literature on ethics and government
- focussing social and governmental attention to critical issues and strategies and advising the government on related matters
- organising training programmes and modules designed to raise capabilities within the government and the larger society to deal with contemporary ethical challenges

Some specific issues that could form part of the basic agenda for the Centre are Corruption, Criminalisation, Ethics of Obedience, Law and Ethics, Ethics and Social sensitivities, Transparency in Government and Psychology of Ethics.

The Hon'ble Prime Minister was appreciative of these initiatives of the Institute and the Ministry of Personnel, Public Grievances and Pensions, Government of India has assured us of their support for the establishment of these Centres of immediate relevance.

Partnership in M.B.A.—Public Service Management Programme

IIPA in collaboration with the University of Birmingham and Civil Service College, U.K. is conducting the in-India modules of the one year Public Service M.B.A. programme in partnership with the Department of Personnel and Training, Government of India, under the U.K. Training Programme managed by British Council Division, New Delhi and funded by Department for International Development. The academic cum training programme is aimed at middle management cadre of officials entrusted with the responsibility of devising and implementing services to the public with efficiency and effectiveness.

The one-week in-India induction module was conducted at IIPA from Sept. 25-30. The module focussed especially on issues pertaining to poverty and services to the disadvantaged sections of society of whom women form a larger proportion. The objectives of the programme were to provide an overview of the programme at U.K., and develop an understanding of issues pertaining to poverty, public service reforms and quality of service delivery. Prof. Aasha Kapur Mehta coordinated under the guidance of Director, IIPA, this one-week module. Dr. Richard Slater and Ms. Annie Rubienska of the University of Birmingham and Ms. Randhir Auluck of the Civil Service College, U.K. represented the partner institutions during the programme.

The second phase of the Programme includes design and delivery of two-week post U.K. Module at IIPA and to render professional support for publication of project dissertations. As part of the programme, Prof. S.S. Singh and Prof. Aasha Kapur Mehta visited the University of Birmingham in March this year to interact with the participants. The Director, Shri M.C. Gupta later visited Birmingham to hold intensive discussions with U.K. Training Partners and the participants to work out plan of the two-week post U.K. Module. This module is scheduled to be held at IIPA in December 1999. For the second course which commenced in August 1999, IIPA has again been chosen as the Partner Institute in India with a much larger role. We have already conducted the 3-week induction module in August-September, 1999.

Launching of new Post-Graduate Professional Programme in Information Technology and Management (ITM)

In its pursuit for capacity building of civil servants and to prepare them for the increasing role of Information Technology (I.T.) in management of public affairs and as a part of programme for continuing education, IIPA launched a one-year "Post-Graduate Professional Programme in Information Technology and Management" in August 1998.

This evening Programme consists of two semesters of 18 week each, covering courses on I.T. Formulation, Principles of Programming, P.C. Packages, Public Administration and Management Perspectives, Quantitative Techniques in Management, Oracle/SQL, Networking, Internet and other Developments in I.T., Financial and Management Accounting, etc. The programme is specially designed for persons holding managerial/executive/ teaching positions in government departments, public enterprises and other organisations.

Twining Arrangement between IIPA and University of Namibia and Mauritius Institute of Public Administration and Management (MIPAM)

Shri M.C. Gupta, Director, IIPA visited Mauritius, Namibia and South Africa in July, 1998.

In Namibia, Shri Gupta signed an MOU with the University of Namibia for their Centre for Public Service Training (CPST). Besides sharing experiences, IIPA will provide support in training of civil servants, research in public administration, consultancy, etc. The MOU will be in force for five years.

In Mauritius an MOU was signed between Director, IIPA and Director, MIPAM for training of civil servants/executives/faculty of MIPAM, joint research projects, exchange of faculty and sharing of information on matters of mutual interest. As a follow up, Prof. Nand Dhameja and Prof. R.K. Tiwari conducted the first training programme on "Policy Formulation and Implementation" at Mauritius in December, 1998 for their senior civil servants. The programme designed to help participants in understanding various policy concepts and their application, was very well received.

B. ACADEMIC ACTIVITIES

B.1 RESEARCH AND CONSULTANCY STUDIES/PROJECTS

During the year, the Institute completed the following research studies and consultancy assignments.

1. Study on "Twelfth Lok Sabha Elections: Policy, Process and Post Script"

Eight faculty members of IIPA undertook a major research project on "Twelfth Lok Sabha Elections: Policy, Process and Post Script". The project consisted of eight sub-projects which independently examined various political, administrative and policy issues and processes pertaining to the conduct of 12th Lok Sabha elections, before, during and after the elections. The areas covered included party manifestoes, resource mobilisation and expenditure patterns of parties and candidates, criminalisation of politics and the role of police, role of administrative machinery, gender dimension in elections, role of media, leadership issues and judicial intervention.

The project was coordinated by Dr. Dolly Arora under the guidance of Director, IIPA.

The framework and major findings of the sub-projects are as given below:

(a) Resource Mobilisation and Expenditure Patterns: A Comparative Study of Poll Strategy of Parties and Contestants

This study examined the nature and broad patterns of relationship between poll strategies of political parties and candidates and how these related to the legal-administrative framework for the conduct of elections in the context of the Twelfth Lok Sabha Elections. The strategy also involved evoking specific inter-play of forces which may elicit a positive response from voters. This study also looked into the overall strategies of parties and conducted specific context based studies, covering three constituencies, viz., Lucknow, Gonda and Gwalior. The study identified a wide range of techniques through which election processes and results were sought to be managed by parties as well as by candidates. Resource mobilisation efforts involved material as well as human resources, based not only on cash transactions but also dependency based and identity based supports. Expenditure patterns involved both direct expenses of candidate and those indirectly incurred by the party and supporters. The increased ceiling has failed to ensure either transparency or accountability of resource mobilisation and expenditure practices inspite of monitoring by the Election Commission. There is a greater need for opening up of the process of public scrutiny and to create the necessary space for electoral reforms.

The study was undertaken by Dr. Dolly Arora.

(b) Leadership Characteristics and their Influence on Voting Behaviour

Success or failure of leadership depends on the extent the leader can assess the objective reality of a country in all its spheres—historical, political, sociological, religious and economic. The leaders must understand country's problems, how to cope with them and to plan for the future.

Voters expect the candidates to possess qualities of leadership, like self-confidence, dependability and capacity to inspire. Also knowledge, courage, compassion, determination and self-control. Consequently some voters lose interest in the election process itself while others vote on account of factors like caste considerations, family affiliations, inducements, threats or promise. Interestingly, leaders of major political parties share these perceptions though their objective is to grasp power and to cling to it.

The study was undertaken by Prof. Bharati Sharma.

(c) Election to the 12th Lok Sabha: A Gender Based Analysis

The analysis presented in this paper shows that political spaces are clearly dominated by one gender. Despite the fact that virtually every party in the country recognised the existence of gender imbalance and made a commitment to correcting it in its manifesto, but still seven per cent of candidates fielded by major political parties were women and the ultimate reality in the 12th Lok Sabha Election was the eight per cent presence of women. Therefore a substantial gender imbalance characterises the 12th Lok Sabha.

There are basically two paths to more gender balanced representation in the Lok Sabha—the reservation route and the grassroots mobilisation route. Both strategies need to be used if the existing anomalies are to be corrected. The concept of reservation is founded on the recognition that deep rooted inequalities need special corrective measures. Electoral arrangements are amenable to change faster than social biases to women's election opportunity and fair representation. Hence the viability of the reservation strategy as a means of accomplishing rapid change.

In the absence of changes in electoral arrangements, there is no substitute for grassroot work and building community bases so strong that no party can afford to ignore the person's candidature regardless of gender biases that may exist.

The study was undertaken by Prof. Aasha Kapur Mehta.

(d) Conduct of Elections—Judicial Interventions

Right to elect, right to be elected and right to dispute an election are statutory rights. The decision of the Election Commission to hold an election on a particular day in a particular constituency, if bonafide, cannot be questioned by the State government on the ground of law and order situation not satisfactory in the constituency. The expression "conduct of election" is wide enough to include the power to issue directions in the process of the conduct of election. The scope of legal challenge of the exercise of powers through election petitions before the High Courts may arise on grounds like withdrawal of candidature, countermanding of election, election expenses, etc.

Ever since the general elections of 1952, Courts have mostly played a positive role, firstly, by not interfering during the election process and secondly, by recognising the exclusive jurisdiction of the Election Commission. It was held that all controversial issues arising out of conduct of elections should be postponed till elections are completed so that the election proceedings were not unduly retarded. Of late, the Courts have shown much concern by way of either expanding the power of Election Commission or pointing out the need of amendment in the existing law relating to elections and also by reminding the statutory authorities about their duties having implication for free and fair elections. However, while granting wide powers to the Election Commission in the matter of superintendence and control over the conduct of elections, the Courts have invariably cautioned that the Election Commission should always remember that it is not above the Law and its decisions are subject to judicial review.

The study was undertaken by Prof. S.S. Singh.

(e) The Role of Administrative Machinery During Election

Election is a complex process involving individual and collective decisions which directly affect the total political and social scenario and provides opportunity for political participation.

Major Findings

- A feeling of oneness emerges among various personnel conducting an election: a major administrative challenge together with a high degree of motivation and innovativeness.
- Normal administrative functions are jeopardized and get affected during the election. Its adverse effects on people remain for a long time even after the election is over.
- Officials put on election duty have to leave their usual workplace and hence suffer from mental stress and insecurity.

Suggestions

- Officials involved in election duty should be allowed to use postal ballot so that their basic voting right is respected.
- To check malpractice during elections, more electronic voting machines need to be commissioned.
- Election process and political instability lead to immeasurable loss in social, economic and psychological terms. Impact of these on common people's lives need to be assessed so that steps can be taken to reduce the impact.
- A corrupt electoral process throws up a corrupt legislature which in turn sets up a corrupt executive thus polluting the administrative system and the public life in the country.

The study was undertaken by Dr. (Mrs.) Lipi Mukhopadhyay.

(f) Manifestoes of National Parties in the 1996 and 1998 Lok Sabha Elections: A Comparison of Central Themes

The study seeks to analyse the programme and agenda as outlined in the election manifestoes of leading national parties in the general elections to the Twelfth Lok Sabha. It also compares the 1998 election Manifestoes of political parties with their 1996 elections Manifestoes. The focus of the study was on the following:

- (i) How do the manifestoes of various political parties compare with each other on major issues—social, political and economic?
- (ii) Do these manifestoes reflect any shift in thinking, when compared to the previous Lok Sabha Elections? If so, in what respects?

The analysis reveals that Manifestoes of political parties are incrementally different from each other. Their economic, political and social agendas outline marginally different approaches. After the BJP dropped its controversial policy objectives like construction of Shri Ram Mandir in Ayodhya, abrogation of Article 370 of the Constitution and a Uniform Civil Code, its agenda is no different from that of other parties. Again, political parties tend to sell the same packages from one election to the other. Their Manifestoes reflect lofty ideals.

The study was undertaken by Dr. (Ms.) Sujata Singh.

(g) Role of Media in Electoral Process

In a democracy, the media plays a very critical role in providing information and feedback from the citizens to the System and vice-versa. During the election time, the Press and the TV through news and views help the electorate in choosing their representatives.

The Press Council of India has defined the role of Press as a neutral arbiter. Professionalism demands that the Press should maintain a high standard of objectivity in reporting matters and events.

The study reveals that national papers have shown a bias in favour of a political alliance, whereas the Hindi papers reflected the views of the political groups that owned them. The regional papers were totally silent on political events during the election time. It seems that the Press does not have the autonomy which is required for strengthening a democracy.

The study was undertaken by Dr. R.K. Barik.

(h) Criminalisation of Politics and Role of Law and Order Administration in Elections

The Study focuses on the impact of criminalisation of politics on voters, voting pattern and election process. It also empirically examined the role and response of State law and order administration and Para-military forces in prevention and control of criminalisation in election process and in protection of electoral rights of the citizens. Bihar and Uttar Pradesh, where criminalisation of politics is most rampant, constitute the universe of this study.

The study also includes two case studies—one at Madhepura in Bihar and the other at Gonda in U.P.—where the conduct of elections was keenly observed on the respective polling dates.

The case study of Madhepura reveals that the party in power had meticulously prepared its plan to rig the elections well before the announcement of election schedule, while the case study of Gonda shows that the administration was by and large fair while conducting the elections. Based on its findings, the study also recommends a number of measures to curb criminalisation of politics.

The study was undertaken by Dr. Jaytilak Guha Roy.

2. Poverty Alleviation Programmes and their Implementational Bottlenecks: A Study of Madhya Pradesh

The study was undertaken to understand the problems of implementation in some of the poverty alleviation programmes like Watershed Development, Jawahar Rozgar Yojana (JRY), Employment Assurance Scheme (EAS) and Indira Awas Yojana (IAY) in two districts (Dhar and Sehore) of Madhya Pradesh.

Despite the guidelines provided on a number of aspects, our study of two micro-watershed projects shows that the micro-watershed plans have not examined the technical aspects, in detail. The problem analysis of the micro-watershed projects have been rather weak and sketchy, limited to peripheral information on a number of aspects and complex interplay between social and environmental factors. In both these aspects, there is insufficient understanding of the problem. The potential beneficiaries have not contributed significantly to the formulation of the problem, strategy, methodology and selection of the activities. As a matter of fact indigenous knowledge and skills have not been analysed as a basis for micro-watershed projects design. A more systematic approach is needed in involving the local community; need for training of staff for skill upgradation; their attitudinal change; and for training of farmers.

There is also a need to take up schemes under JRY and EAS for land-levelling, soil and water conservation, reclamation of saline, alkaline, acidic, and water logged lands; construction of irrigation channels and drains; afforestation, etc. The selection of the projects should not be left to the bureaucracy but should involve the beneficiaries in the decision-making process which would provide a more sustainable basis of development.

The study was undertaken by Prof. R.K. Tiwari.

3. Biodiversity Conservation Prioritisation Project

The Project identified various sites, species and strategies which are a priority for biodiversity conservation. Sites were prioritised from among grasslands, wetlands, deserts, mountains, coastal regions, oceans, islands, forests, national parks and sanctuaries, sacred sites and biosphere reserves.

For species, priority lists were developed from among plants, mammals, birds, amphibians, and invertebrates.

Apart from identifying priorities, the project also developed a participatory methodology for prioritisation which can be used by other countries, especially data deficient countries. It has also identified critical gaps in the available information. The study was undertaken by Shri Shekhar Singh.

4. Natural Resource Accounting

This project primarily sought to develop a methodology for decision-making regarding natural resources. It attempts to develop a system of accounting and budgeting that allows for rational decision-making. This methodology was applied to certain aspects of the Yamuna river sub-basin and the National Capital Region. It assesses the way in which water, forests and wildlife protected areas need to be planned for.

The project identifies the problems with the traditional methodologies for natural resource accounting where an economic value is sought to be ascribed to all elements of nature. It suggests an alternate system whereby natural resources are allocated physically to meet with ecological and social needs. Any surpluses are then introduced into the market system.

The study was undertaken by Shri Shekhar Singh.

5. Citizen Government Interface in Urban Environmental Problems

The main findings of the Study are: Extensive migration in search of livelihood has resulted in shortage of housing, making 75 per cent of Delhi citizens reside in substandard unauthorised housing with the most unhygienic conditions and near absence to civic amenities.

- Vehicular pollution accounts for 67 per cent of pollutant emissions which has been increasing at 15.5 per cent per annum on an average. Low quality of fuel supplied contributes largely to the pollution. Natural conditions like dust storms cause high dust and SPM content from April to June. Temperature inversions during winter trap the pollutants at the ground level causing high pollutant concentration.
- The peak noise hours in some busy market places and traffic intersections even cross the 100 dBA mark. The river Yamuna, the most important surface water source, has the worst water quality in its Delhi stretch, viz., "E", suitable only for industrial and irrigation uses. Ground water aquifers also show high concentrations of heavy metals.

- Pollution related diseases are increasing as are those related to contaminated water and poor sanitation.
- Lack of awareness regarding the urban problems and general apathy towards the condition of the city poses a major problem.

An interface between the government and the citizenry needs to be developed at the individual, neighbourhood and state levels. The awareness level of the individual citizen also needs to be improved.

The study was undertaken by Prof. Vinod K. Sharma.

6. Concurrent Evaluation of Indira Awas Yojana (IAY) and Million Wells Scheme (MWS)—A Pilot Study

This was a pilot study in connection with the proposed Concurrent Evaluation of IAY and MWS. Shergrah block of Jodhpur district was selected for the survey. Twenty beneficiaries were selected for each of the two programmes.

The study was undertaken by Dr. Sujata Singh.

7. Human Habitations: Emerging Issues in Developing Countries

The main findings of the study are:

- Management of good quality of life is becoming problematic, specially in metropolitan centres. Inadequate urban infrastructure would have to be strengthened to improve the quality of life of the people, especially the urban poor.
- Glaring disparities due to economic and social factors which have made city life unsafe will have to be brought down.
- Availability of potable water for all and prevention of pollution of water resources from domestic sewage and garbage and industrial and chemical effluents would have to be ensured for preventing epidemics and health hazards.
- Taller multi-storeyed buildings and sky-scrapers are becoming inescapable for commercial and residential purposes, necessitating adoption of high technologies for achieving land use economy.
- The civic administration would have to be modernised and more actively involved in urban development and provision of housing at affordable cost. A comprehensive and integrated programme of urban management is the need of the hour.
- Along with massive programmes of urban development, improvement in the life of the masses who continue to inhabit rural areas has to be brought about in a sustained way to balance rural-urban development.

The study was undertaken by Prof. Girish K. Misra.

CONSULTANCY ASSIGNMENTS

1. Rational Pay Structure for Subordinate Judiciary in India

The First National Judicial Pay Commission (FNJPC) was constituted by the Government of India, by resolution dated March 21, 1996 with a view to evolve the principles which should govern the structure of pay and other emoluments, inter alia, of Judicial Officers belonging to the Subordinate Judiciary all over the country. The Commission assigned the task of suggesting rational pay structure to the Indian Institute of Public Administration (IIPA), in July 1997, on the following terms of reference:

- (i) To analyse the existing pay structure and conditions of service of the Judicial Officers in the States and Union Territories;
- (ii) To examine and compare the pay structure and conditions of service of the Subordinate Judicial Services with those of Civil Servants;
- (iii) To evolve broad principles which should form the basis of determining the pay structure and other emoluments for the Subordinate Judiciary in the country; and
- (iv) To suggest a rational pay structure and other emoluments for the members of Subordinate Judiciary of the States and Union Territories.

In addition, subsequently the Institute was also requested to work out interim relief to the Judicial Officials. Consequently, yet another term of reference, viz., to work out an interim relief and the quantum thereof along with the date of implementation which could be given to the members of the Subordinate Judiciary of the States and Union Territories was added. Our Report on Interim Relief was submitted to the Chairman, FNJPC on December 31, 1997.

The final consultancy report was submitted to the FNJPC on 12th August, 1998.

The assignment was jointly undertaken by Shri M.C. Gupta, Director, IIPA, Prof. O.P. Minocha and Prof. S.S. Singh.

2. Trade Related Entrepreneurship Assistance and Development

The study was assigned by UNDP.

Apart from offering participation in the three-week UN mission, it required conducting a case study on gum karaya. This was done and the study entitled "Sustainable Interventions for Poverty Alleviation: A Best Practice Case of Gum Karaya in Andhra Pradesh" was published by UNIFEM in mid 1998. The main findings are given below:

- Tribals get marginal returns for the large variety of Non Timber Forest Products (NTFPs) that they collect, primarily due to lack of knowledge regarding the uses and commercial value of these resources as well as lack of value addition. As the gum karaya case shows, the export price received from gum is a function of quality, reflected especially in viscosity, swelling ability and colour. Methods adopted for handling gum at each stage, from collection at the tree, to transportation, drying, sorting, storage and sale, determine quality.

- A combination of factors, including responsive and sensitive administration, openness to use of scientific and technical expertise for identification of export market needs, detailed analysis and experimentation on the product to gain an understanding of it, determination of handling methodology to ensure retention of product properties, combined with the large-scale transfer of scientific know-how through extensive training, using local dialect and examples relevant to the tribal context, together contributed to the success of the gum karaya case through providing increased returns to tribal gum-pickers.
- Individuals can make a difference and markets can be made to work to the advantage of the poor. Scientific and technical knowledge based interventions in NTFPs, value addition, increased competitiveness of such products, empowerment of the tribals and sustainable use of forest resources could possibly provide one route to alleviating poverty among the tribal poor. The assignment was undertaken by Prof. Aasha Kapur Mehta.

3. Development and Implementation of Computer Software for inter-regional and intra-regional transfer of teachers of KVS

The study was assigned by Kendriya Vidyalaya Sangathan.

Kendriya Vidyalaya Sangathan employs more than 40,000 teachers and principals posted at different locations all over the country in different regions. Transfer of teachers from one place to the other is a regular phenomena in the KVS.

Priority on the basis of criteria defined by the KVS is established through the KVS transfer rules. Manual transfers, apart from being tedious and time-consuming, have a subjective element in them. In order to ensure transfers systematically and on objective criteria, IIPA was assigned a consultancy project for development and implementation of computer software for effecting transfers of the KVS teachers and principals. On the basis of a detailed systems study, software applications system was developed by the Institute. Various factors like posting on difficult station, posting of spouse, medical reasons, etc. were built logically into the system to fix weighed priority on the basis of which transfers could be made by KVS. The software has been successfully implemented and used by the KVS.

The assignment was undertaken by Prof. J.C. Kapur.

4. Design and application of computerised skill test for recruitment of Data Entry Operators for Employees Provident Fund Organisation
5. To develop a computerised skill test to include revised criteria for speed and accuracy for skilled employees of the Employees Provident Fund Organisation

These studies were assigned by the Central Employees Provident Fund Organisation.

Central Employees Provident Fund Organisation of the Government of India has been recruiting Data Entry and Computer Operators for different functions. The recruitment earlier had been done on the basis of interviews and skill test conducted and evaluated manually. The organisation, however, felt that the recruitments thus made did not throw up good candidates for employment. In order to eliminate the biases of manual evaluation and oral interviews, the Central Employees Provident Fund Organisation requested the Institute to develop a computerised skill test for evaluating the speed and accuracy of the candidates to be recruited as operators. The test designed by the Institute was conducted on the computer and evaluated by the computer itself to prepare the merit list giving pre-specified weightage to speed and accuracy. This fool-proof computerised test was tamper-free and eliminated all subjective elements in the recruitment of the operators.

The above consultancy assignments were handled by Prof. J.C. Kapur.

6. Software Development and "Facilities Management" at Inland Container Depot of the Central Warehousing Corporation, New Delhi

The study was assigned by the Central Warehousing Corporation, New Delhi.

The purpose of this consultancy project was to generate reports and queries required by the Central Warehousing Corporation through a computerised on-line transaction processing system (OLTP) using fourth generation language (4 GL). To ensure the smooth running of the computerised system, the task of operationalising it and managing the operating system and the application software at ICD, Patparganj was assigned to the Institute.

The project was completed successfully and highly appreciated by the client organisation.

The above consultancy assignment was handled by Prof. J.C. Kapur.

B.2 TRAINING PROGRAMMES

Twenty-fourth Advanced Professional Programme in Public Administration

The Advanced Professional Programme in Public Administration (APPPA) is a highly prestigious academic-cum-training programme designed for middle and senior level officers of government. Successful candidates are awarded M.Phil Degree in Public Administration of Panjab University, Chandigarh and Master's Diploma in Public Administration (MDPA) of IIPA. Ministry of Personnel, Public Grievances and Pensions, Government of India sponsors this programme.

The objectives of the Twentyfourth APPPA (1998-99) were:

- To provide an opportunity to middle and senior level civil servants to reflect upon their experiences.
- To impart knowledge of recent developments in social sciences and their application in administration.
- To acquaint the participants with developments in administrative and management skills.
- To enable the participants to make critical analysis of environmental and other factors impinging upon the functioning of the administrative system; and
- To expose the participants to the complexities and issues involved in public policy, analysis and implementation in the Indian context.

Apart from an extensive course-work, the 9-month programme included three field studies.

The village study was aimed at enabling the participants to have a first-hand assessment of the implementation of various rural development schemes. Four teams of participants undertook visits to Ningaon Ketki in District Pune (Maharashtra), Janwada in District Ranga Reddy (Andhra Pradesh), Singari in District Ranchi (Bihar) and Daula in District Gurgaon (Haryana) to conduct the study.

The urban study was aimed at imparting an understanding of the process of urbanisation and exploring the working of urban development programmes in progress in select cities. Four teams of participants visited Faridabad, Agra, Shimla, and Chandigarh for conducting the study.

The foreign study included a visit to Paris and Strasbourg (France) during November, 1998. The purpose of the visit was to enable the participants to gain a first-hand knowledge of the recent reforms in governance and public administration system of France and to provide them an exposure to the key issues pertaining to the European Union.

Shri R.C. Agarwal, who secured the highest marks, was awarded the late Prof. V.K.N. Menon Prize; the second and third prizes were awarded to Shri S.K. Purkayastha and Shri S.C. Gupta, respectively. Shri Shailendra Nigam was awarded the 'Director's Special Prize' for having consistently shown excellence in the Programme.

The Programme was inaugurated by Shri Sompal, Minister of State for Agriculture, Government of India on July 1, 1998. Thirtyone senior officers of All India and Central Services participated in the 24th APPPA. The Programme concluded on March 29, 1999; this coincided with the Institute's Foundation Day. Shri Atal Bihari Vajpayee, Prime Minister of India was the Chief Guest and delivered the Convocation Address and the Founder's Day Lecture and distributed diplomas and prizes to the successful participants.

Prof. A.K. Sharma was the Programme Director and Dr.(Mrs.) Rajesh Singh was the Associate Programme Director of the 24th APPPA.

B.3 CASE STUDY PROGRAMME

During the year, a competition for case studies was organised. To facilitate better response, guidelines regarding the methodology of case writing were circulated. Twenty-five entries were received which were evaluated and awards were distributed in the Annual General Body Meeting held on October 23, 1998. While no entry qualified for the first prize, Dr. V. Upadhyay's entry on the "Impact of Subarna Rekha Multi-purpose Project on the people of Singhbhum: A study of three affected villages and two Rehabilitation Sites" was awarded the second prize of Rs.2,000 and Dr. R. Veeramani won the consolation prize of Rs.1,500 for his entry on Sugar Industry in Tamil Nadu: Madurantakam Cooperative Sugar Mills.

A sum of Rs.20,000 was granted to Dr. Anil C. Ittyerah for preparing case studies concerning the development of fisheries by peoples' organisations and cooperatives in the state of Madhya Pradesh.

A volume of 15 case studies under the title "Studies in Public Administration in India: Case Studies" edited by Shri M.C. Gupta and Prof. K.N. Kabra was released.

B.4 THE ACADEMIC COMMITTEE

The Academic Committee of the Institute which assists the Executive Council on all academic matters concerning education, training, research and consultancy met periodically to consider various proposals in these areas. It also discussed proposals on creation of Endowment Professorial Chairs, Revised Library Rules, raising of ceiling of financial assistance to Branches for carrying out research projects, norms for conduct of paid training programmes, Twinning Arrangements with Mauritius Institute of Public Administration and Management and the University of Namibia, etc.

B.5 PLANNING AND ADVISORY COMMITTEE

The Planning and Advisory Committee advises the Director on various academic activities of the Institute, viz., consultancy, publications, training, research, etc. The Committee chaired by the Director, consists of Chairmen of all the Academic Centres, APPPA Programme Director, Coordinators of Research and Consultancy, Training and Computer Centre. The Registrar, Librarian and Joint Editor are the special invitees. The Committee met thrice during the year and discussed issues related to planning of academic activities, viz., Training Courses, Research Projects, etc.

B.6 ACADEMIC CENTRES

The Academic Centres, each comprising of a group of faculty members with interest, experience and expertise in the concerned area of study, met from time to time for (a) preparing annual plan of work in their respective areas of research and training and periodical review thereon; (b) discussing, coordinating and reviewing individual plan of action; (c) acting as a forum for academic interaction and intellectual development of members by organising seminars, special lectures; and (d) coordinating activities with other academic groups in promoting interdisciplinary tasks. Each Centre elects its Chairman for a period of two years.

The National Centre for Disaster Management, which was set up in March 1995 with the support of the Ministry of Agriculture, Government of India, besides gearing up the national, state and district level administration for tackling calamities, also coordinates research, case studies and training programmes in this field. The Centre is building up a data base on natural disasters.

The Centre is in the process of networking with various academic institutions and NGOs involved in disaster management activities. It is also helping disaster management cells at state level academies in Uttar Pradesh, Haryana, Assam, Tamil Nadu, Orissa, Maharashtra, etc. in their training and research programmes.

ANNEXURE I

ADDRESS OF PRIME MINISTER SHRI ATAL BIHARI VAJPAYEE ON THE FOUNDER'S DAY OF THE INDIAN INSTITUTE OF PUBLIC ADMINISTRATION AND APPA CONVOCATION

New Delhi—March 29, 1999

It gives me great pleasure to participate in this function to mark the Founder's Day of the Indian Institute of Public Administration.

Today, IIPA is 45 years old. It was set up in the aftermath of India's Independence and, a little later, the founding of the Indian Republic. Its mission was to evolve, through study and research, a philosophy for public administration consistent with the social, economic, and political ideals of an ageless nation reborn as a young Republic. IIPA was also expected to actively participate in the training and retraining of civil servants in the art and science of public administration.

While celebrating the Founder's Day, I am sure that all those associated with the Institute will do serious introspection on how far the IIPA has succeeded in this mission. In doing so, the IIPA should compare itself with other institutions engaged in research and training in this field. After having been in existence for over four decades, the IIPA should also benchmark itself against the pre-eminent centres of public administration in the world.

Today I wish to share with you some of my personal reflections on the subject of public administration and its critical importance for delivering good governance to our people. In the preamble to the National Agenda for Governance, which is the common policy framework for the ruling coalition, we have pledged to give good governance. "Our first commitment", we said, "to the people is to give a stable, honest, transparent and efficient government capable of accomplishing all-round development. For this the government shall introduce time-bound programmes of needed administrative reforms including those for the civil services".

I have closely observed the system of administration from outside as a political activist and as a Member of Parliament for more than four decades. For the past one year, I have also observed it from inside as the head of the government. My observations from both outside and inside have left me in no doubt that our system of administration is ill-equipped to fulfil our national objectives and the aspirations of the common man. This has also been the experience of all the political parties who have formed governments either at the Centre or in the States.

Hence, the need for administrative reforms is one subject on which there is unanimity in the country. Indeed, there is a far greater consensus on administrative reforms than on economic reforms. Yet, these reforms have not proceeded well enough, fast enough and deep enough. This is because, there is no consensus and clarity on what kind of administrative reforms we need, and how to effect them.

The objectives of administrative reforms which can support the goal of good governance are clear. We need an administrative system that is responsive, transparent, efficient and caring.

If it is true that people are the king in a democracy, then we cannot have an administrative machinery that lords over the citizens.

It should respond to their concerns and complaints—with dispatch and dedication.

Its functioning should be open and accountable. Honesty, and an ability to decide between the right and the wrong, are qualities as important as professional competence.

Its efficiency should be clearly demonstrated in its results and performance. I especially lay much emphasis on the delivery of services at the least cost to the exchequer.

Finally, it should be compassionate. In a country where a majority of the people are victims of poverty and neglect, we have to have an administrative system that has a heart that feels for the poor and a mind that cares for their needs.

For the system of administration to improve, we must, first of all, recognise the strengths of our civil service. I believe that the civil service in India is one of the great resources we have to realise the objectives of building a strong, prosperous, and self-confident India. There is hardly any other section of our society that has a better understanding of the realities of India—our problems, our potential, and also the means to solve the problems—than the vast body of our administrators. Not even the political class can match the breadth and depth of our civil servants' knowledge of dealing with diverse and complex problems.

For example, by the time an IAS officer achieves a certain level of seniority, he or she will have served in so many capacities, in so many diverse areas of development, and in so many parts of our diverse country, that their understanding and experience of issues becomes truly valuable. A typical secretary-level officer has the experience of grassroots administration as a district collector, a specialized bureaucrat in a wide number of specific areas in the subsequent stages of his or her career, and later on once again as an administrator with a larger canvas upon reaching the higher levels of seniority.

If this is true of one good officer, one can imagine how precious would the collective knowledge and expertise of a continuously expanding band of good administrators be.

Yet, in spite of the rich administrative resource that we have at our disposal, the reality is that we have not succeeded in creating a system that meets people's expectations.

The blame for this rests largely with the political class. Not all the elected representatives of the people who get to perform executive functions in the government either recognise the richness of the administrative resource at their command, or know-how to use it to promote public good. Worse still, they often politicise the bureaucracy through their acts of unmerited favouritism and victimisation in transfers and postings.

This has to stop.

In our democratic framework of governance, the political leadership of the government has necessarily to change from time to time. However, the administrative system, which assists and works under the guidance of the elected representatives of the government, is a permanent and continuing entity. Our Constitution, and the rules framed under the Constitution, provide for ample checks and safeguards to create the right balance between the political class and the administrative system.

Sadly, not all members of the political class and the administrative class have performed their respective responsibilities with diligence and an eye for the public good. Private interests and sectional interests have often overshadowed the interests of the public and the nation. This has eroded the credibility of both politicians and civil servants in the eyes of the people. In the long-run, this loss of credibility is a threat to our democracy.

This, too, has to stop.

As I said before, public administration cannot deliver public good unless the political leadership firmly upholds people's interests and national interests to be supreme. My Government is committed to restoring their supremacy in each and every area of administration.

Friends, there is, however, another aspect of administration where it is primarily the responsibility of the bureaucracy to bring about a positive change. That is the manner in which it deals with public issues and members of the public. Our people have great expectations from the government they elect. However, the fulfilment of their expectations depends largely on how well and how fast the policies and programmes of the government are implemented by the bureaucracy.

Friends, my greatest concern today is in the area of implementation. The National Agenda for Governance has clearly spelt out our priorities. In the light of these priorities, a large number of good policies, programmes, and schemes have been worked out. Of course, we have also inherited a large number of good policies, programmes, and schemes from the previous governments.

Where we fumble, however, is in implementing them in a manner that satisfies the people. I have said it before, and I say it again today, that I cannot accept delays and slippages in implementation. I cannot, because the people cannot.

The people want to see action, and not just hear words of promise repeated again and again. That is why, the subtitle of the document on the National Agenda for Governance states our commitment: "Closing the Gap between People's Aspirations and Government's Performance".

I want to see the entire administrative machinery, from top to bottom, work with a sense of mission and a result-oriented approach. I want to see them work with their hearts and minds fully in the administrative responsibility they hold. I want to see them work faster and work better. I want to see them work with a sense of mission and accountability. In doing so, I want to see them work without any fear or favour.

Let me, in this context, quote from the speech that Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru delivered at the Inaugural meeting of your Institute on March 29, 1954. He said: "The role of the administrator is to achieve something, and not to exist in some kind of an ivory tower, following certain rules of procedure and, narcissus-like, looking on itself with complete satisfaction. The test after all is the human beings and their welfare"

The subject of administrative reforms, and the supportive legal reforms, will be a priority for my Government in the coming months. In this endeavor, we seek the assistance of institutes like the IIPA.

With these words, I thank the Governing Council of your Institute for giving me this opportunity to share my thoughts on public administration. I extend my best wishes for the civil servants who have successfully completed the course of Advanced Professional Programme in Public Administration.

Thank you.
